Welcome...

Interior designer Paul Siskin believes the substance of space and its ability to function matter as much as its style, and all should reflect its inhabitants. He is ranked among the country's top 100 designers by New York, House Beautiful, and New York Home magazines and was inducted into the Interior Design Hall of Fame in 2006.

In 2020, Paul Siskin relocated from New York to Santa Fe, New Mexico, where he is continuing his interior design and promoting his metal furniture collection, Angelus Furniture.

Showhouse winners for 1994

Every year decorators are invited to create their dream rooms for designer showhouses across the nation, then House Beautiful's jury has the fun of picking the best of the lot. This year's winners are clean-lined, classically influenced rooms using natural materials

For this small study at the Kap Bay Boys & Girls Club Decatur Showhouse in New York, Paul Siddle conceived a unique-in-charge office for Sigmund Freud. Note the comfortable, centrally placed sofa, the luxuriously styled Regency armchair, and the suggestive bust on a table behind Freud's original study too, ornate filigree of Egypt, such as the pharaoh of the Pyramids here and the lion papyrus stool next to the bust also chair. On the chimney wall and beneath the chair table, the paint technique is "Stucco Veneziano," a multi-layered mix of pigment and wax that produces a rich, lustrous surface. The 19th-century rug echoes the checks of the chair and cornice. High-contrast colors in the artist's study would be washed by the cool blue and green pillows and top of sofa, touchable even in the marble entrance.
